HALO™
HEADBAND

Don't Sweat Without It!

How it all began! People sweat. It drips, stings and burns when it gets in your eyes and impairs your vision when competing, working out, or just recreating. Until now, traditional sweatbands only provided temporary relief. Once they become saturated, sweat keeps dripping. Two competitive athletes got together to build a better sweat absorption and channeling system and the revolutionary Halo Headband was born.

SWEAT BLOCK TECHNOLOGY

Sweat Block Technology. The concept is simple. A watertight, non-slip seal built into each Halo Headband directs sweat away from your eyes and keeps the headband in place, even when saturated. US Patent 6,567,991.

Our simple three step solution. 1: absorb sweat 2: evaporate moisture 3: upon saturation, redirect sweat away from your eyes.

DRYLINE® fabric is a unique, dual-component fabric featuring a hydrophobic fiber (Polyester) inside and a hydrophilic fiber (Nylon) outside. This unique combination creates a push-pull moisture transport design drawing perspiration from the skin to the fabric surface where it evaporates. In addition, DRYLINE includes VisaEndurance, a microfiber polyester embedded with silver ions, which prevent the growth of bacteria. No bacteria = no smell.

Halo headbands are perfect for use in all sports and recreational activities where you sweat. Simply slip the Halo over your head, adjust the patented watertight seal and enjoy your activity. They are made from the highest quality materials and workmanship, backed by a limited one year warranty.

What the Press has to say about Halo Headbands!

“When I first saw the Halo a few years ago I was skeptical—its little yellow strip and thin material looked silly. Surely that would be annoying on long rides and ultimately ineffective. But since the first try, I’ve used a Halo consistently and exclusively because it works great. It’s made from two thin layers of Dryline fabric, a microfiber that not only wicks and evaporates moisture but also prevents the growth of bacteria. The small rubberlike strip creates a watertight seal on your forehead so that when the material gets saturated, sweat runoff doesn’t drip into your eyes or splatter glasses. The Halo is also durable; I’ve had years of use from some of mine.”

—Bicycling, August 2007

“Put to the Test—The light-gauge fabric fits easily under your helmet. Even if the band gets completely soaked, the elastomer strip keeps sweat from dripping into your eyes. Instead, the sweat runs along the edge of the elastomer and drips off by your ears. This is the best designed and most beneficial sweatband on the market.”

— Mountain Bike Action, April 2003

“Five stars for a headband? You Bet. This is one of those simple products that will become as much a staple in your riding gear as your helmet. Slide on the Halo II, take the fit pads out of your helmet (or go to the next smaller size, because the Halo II acts as a fitting pad) and put your helmet on. Notice something?

A more firm and secure fit than you ever felt with the helmet’s stock sizing pads. Now go ride and make sure it is hot. Go ahead, sweat like you are in a sauna. The thin Halo soaks it up. No more showers of sweat over your glasses. Going downhill, the Halo helps keep the helmet from rocking on your head. And unlike helmet pads, our Halo never got stinky, plus it is easier to wash (just throw it in the washer with your jerseys).”

— Mountain Bike Action, January 2007

“High-performance Dryline material wicks perspiration, but that rubbery strip on the backside stops sweat from dripping into your eyes.”

— Bicycling, May 2002

“Keeps sweat out of your eyes and off your face. Sure, the fabric wicks, but the real secret is the rubbery strip on the back that channels sweat away.”

— Bicycling, March 2002

“The headband has reduced the amount of sweat running into my eyes!”
